CLC Lodging Builds Workforce Lodging Savings For CFMA Professionals at the 2012 Annual Conference

Wichita, Kansas (Jun. 22, 2012) – CLC Lodging (CLC), a leading negotiator of workforce lodging rates, brings its workforce travel savings and solutions back to the Construction Financial Management Association's Annual Conference and Exposition 2012 Jun. 23-27 in Orlando, Fla.

Using the consolidated purchasing power of more than 10 million room nights annually at over 16,000 hotels, CLC negotiates rates that typically are lower than customers can get on their own. Businesses that use a hotel lodging program for their workforce travel needs can get room rates 20% below lowest published market rates - significantly lowering their workforce travel costs. In addition to better room rates, these smart companies also save on operational costs with efficient processes that reduce time spent on lodging and increase travel policy compliance.

"With construction projects that can last for weeks or months at a time, lodging expenses can quickly get out of hand without a reputable hotel lodging program in place," said Alex Calder, National Sales Manager with CLC. "Our low rates and national hotel network can save construction businesses meaningful money and admin time on lodging."

Nearly 500 large organizations and over 50,000 small and medium accounts from the energy, trucking, rail, staffing and food service industries depend on CLC to save on business lodging. All CLC client travelers gain access to 24-hour support from CLC's Traveler Support Center, which is open 24x7x365.

"We're excited to be back," said Derrek Schartz, CLC Lodging's Senior Vice President of Sales. "We've had lots of success in this space. We're interested in learning more about CFMA professionals' lodging problems and seeing how CLC can help solve them."

Industry professionals attending CFMA 2012 can learn more about CLC's workforce lodging discounts by visiting Booth 715. Other businesses that want to start saving on business travel can call (866) 362-0739 or e-mail sales@clclodging.com.
